

FAIL TO DECIDE ON SUITABLE MAN

Republicans in Eighth Not Prepared to Nominate Candidate.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

Congressional Convention Indorses Administration of Taft.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Alexandria, Va., June 20.—The Republican Congressional Convention of the Eighth District, which assembled here this afternoon, failed to nominate a candidate for Congress from this district, contrary to expectations. The roll was first called of all cities and counties represented, and each reported through its chairman, that it was not prepared to place a candidate in the field.

Finally the resolution of M. W. Carter, of Orange, that the selection of a congressional candidate be left to the congressional committee, district-congressional chairman and State committee, together with the executive committee of the Eighth District, was passed without opposition.

The meeting was called to order by H. H. Dodge, district chairman, and J. W. Green, Loudoun county, served as secretary. The meeting was organized with the election of W. J. Rogers as chairman and J. W. Gregg as secretary.

Taft is Indorsed. Resolutions were adopted reaffirming allegiance to the principles stated in the Chicago platform of 1898, and heartily indorsing the administration of President Taft in his efforts to put those principles into effective operation.

The resolutions point to the already great accomplishments of his administration as evidence that in due time all of the promises of the Chicago platform will be performed with fidelity. It is set forth in the resolutions that they have entire confidence in the wisdom of his recommendations and policies, and with an abiding faith that his administration will be one of the most fruitful in beneficent results, they pledge to President Taft loyal and earnest support.

Confidence in Slomp. Greetings were extended Representative C. B. Slomp, State chairman, and confidence was expressed in his work, and a wish expressed that he may be returned to Congress. The work of Joseph L. Crupper, this city, and M. K. Lowery, Stafford, was approved, together with their loyalty to the party's principles.

The following State committee members were afterward elected: William Brown, Loudoun; C. D. Green, Stafford; J. B. Grayson, Fauquier; J. A. Eggeborn, Alexandria; Samuel Diener, Culpeper; Edward Walton, Fairfax; and C. D. Flannigan, Loudoun, were nominated, but they met defeat.

MEYER VIEWS DAMAGE

Visits Navy Yard and Sees Work of Storm.

New York, June 19.—Secretary of the Navy Meyer, who came to New York for the Roosevelt reception, visited the Navy Yard in Brooklyn today to view the damage wrought by yesterday's storm, which snapped off the crane, upset and partly submerged the government's $250,000 floating derrick Hercules. The Hercules had been hoisting some plate on the battleship Florida, but the Florida was not scratched. Mr. Meyer said he had telegraphed to Washington ordering that repair work of the derrick begin at once and requesting that $100,000 to finance the work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

RICHMOND HAIR EMPORIUM, 214-216 N. 5th Street, Richmond, Virginia. Offers To-Day For One Week

That have been shown in this section. Our madam, who has just returned from the North, has brought with her thousands of dollars' worth of Ladies' Fine Hair Goods that will be sold at remarkably low prices—prices never heard of in Richmond or any other place before.

Now is the time to select your goods before going on your vacation.

The Mme.

Who will be personally in attendance during this sale, will be pleased to see her many friends and customers and give to every lady that may desire it—FREE OF ALL COST—advice in regard to care of the scalp, the arrangement of the hair, and many other little details that pertain to a lady to assist in making "WOMAN BEAUTIFUL."

Remember, hair dressed FREE with every purchase.

SWITCHES

Beautiful Short Stem Switches.

18-inch All Long Hair, 1½-oz., 98c.

Regular $2.00 value.

20-inch All Long Hair, 1½-oz., $3.

Regular $4.00 value.

22-inch All Long Hair, 2-oz., $2.00.

Regular $4.00 value.

24-inch All Long Hair, 2-oz., $4.00.

Regular $7.00 ones.

GRAY SWITCHES.

Beautiful All Pure Gray Hair

Switches, containing no mixture of any kind, at remarkably low prices.

Come and see them.

One of the drummers of a large importing house sold to us all his samples from me saying I did not want the crane. I sent no such dispatch.

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

Two Forged Telegrams. Two forged telegrams signed with the name of Rear Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, were sent from Brooklyn to the Navy Department yesterday—one to Washington and one to Captain Fremont, at the Brooklyn navy yard. Both reported that the battleship Florida had been torn from her moorings in yesterday's storm and had gone adrift.

"I did report to the department the accident to the floating crane Hercules," said Mr. Meyer, "but I sent no message about the Florida."

"Captain Fremont," he continued, "was asked to send to the Brooklyn navy yard a floating crane capable of lifting seventy tons. To-day Assistant Secretary Winthrop advised me that he had received word from Captain Fremont that the captain got a dispatch

work be inserted in the emergency appropriation bill. "It is important that we start at once," he said, "otherwise there will be long delay in completing the Florida."

"The Florida was not hurt in the least," he continued. "Two sections of armor plates, weighing thirty-two tons each, were knocked from the float and are under water, but I think we can repair the damage in fifteen days, provided the appropriation is made."

of Beautiful Jet Pins and Barrettes, and, as you know, jet is worn more than ever, and so you will do well to secure one of these Beautiful Pins at your own price.

35-inch All Long Hair, $15 value, $8.

Handsome 34-inch, 4½-oz. All Round Head Coronet Braids, regular

$20 value. Sold at any store at a much higher price. Tuesday's price will be $10.98.

They are the first quality Convent Hair, no mixture of any kind.

Dr. Winslow's Dandruff Cure, 50c

bottle for Tuesday, 19c.

Dr. Winslow's Hair Grower, 50c bottle Tuesday, 25c.

Golden Bark Hair Wash, 25c bottle.

Box of Talc Powder given free with every purchase of hair goods.

PUFFS! PUFFS! PUFFS!

Are the rage again.

Beautiful $5.00 Puffs, $3.00.

Beautiful $4.00 Puffs, $2.00.

Beautiful $7.00 Puffs, $5.00.

Beautiful $3.00 Puffs, $1.00.

$1.50 Chignons, 80c.

Hair Nets, 10c.

Hair Nets, 25c ones, 19c.

Hair Nets, 35c ones, 25c.

Pompadours, Transformations,

$5 All Around Head Pompadours,

$3.50.

$3 All Around Head Pompadours,</